

Message from Chancellor

Keith S. Edwards

deeply rooted and invested in the heart of Central

New York. I am pleased to share the Syracuse University

Early in my tenure, I proposed four ideas to propel this University to even greater heights—enhancing undergraduate education, efficiently and effectively supporting research, embracing desirable change, and being the best university for veterans. I said these actions will make us better and along the way the work we do would enhance all the communities that matter to us and to the world. Today, I believe just as strongly that the most important contribution this University can make to this city and to this region is to be a great, thriving, and engaged international research university.

propel this University to even greater heights—enhancing undergraduate education, efficiently and effectively supporting research, embracing desirable change, and being the best university for veterans. I said these actions will make us better and along the way the work we do would enhance all the communities that matter to us and to the world. Today, I believe just as strongly that the most important contribution this University can make to this city and to this region is to be a great, thriving, and engaged international research university.

As a preeminent academic institution, Syracuse University—its people, research, and service—has a great impact on the world. In collaboration with our area friends and partners, our impact on local communities is even greater.

As a preeminent academic institution, Syracuse University—its people, research, and service—has a great impact on the world. In collaboration with our area friends and partners, our impact on local communities is even greater.

The largest private employer in the region, the University helps to fuel the engine of public prosperity as a partner in our community's growth. Beyond direct financial investments, our students, staff, and faculty invest countless hours of intellectual capital and engagement to support community organizations.

The largest private employer in the region, the University helps to fuel the engine of public prosperity as a partner in our community's growth. Beyond direct financial investments, our students, staff, and faculty invest countless hours of intellectual capital and engagement to support community organizations.

Many University-based programs provide specialized skills development for our students while delivering invaluable services to enhance our region. From transportation services to restaurants, from cultural centers to community centers, the University reaches well beyond its campus to touch lives, invest in our neighborhood, and expand opportunities for the residents of Central New York.

Many University-based programs provide specialized skills development for our students while delivering invaluable services to enhance our region. From transportation services to restaurants, from cultural centers to community centers, the University reaches well beyond its campus to touch lives, invest in our neighborhood, and expand opportunities for the residents of Central New York.

Under Vice President for Community Engagement and direct and indirect investments, including financial contributions, access to facilities, and other resources, we will align with our academic goals and institutional priorities to meet community needs. This approach will enable us to sustain and leverage our partnerships for the future.

Under Vice President for Community Engagement and direct and indirect investments, including financial contributions, access to facilities, and other resources, we will align with our academic goals and institutional priorities to meet community needs. This approach will enable us to sustain and leverage our partnerships for the future.

As you learn more about our